Bring on the Revolution - Developer News

NEWS_PDF_AUTHOR: Anonymous

NEWS_PDF_DATE: 2002/5/10 5:00:00

Launched this week, SiteBid.com is the latest development in the Open Source Content Management Community. A b2b marketplace through which developers, designers, project managers, and other web professionals with experience of one or more of the Open Source CMS systems may freely bid for projects.

There is a rapidly growing but loose network of web development companies, and individuals who are working virtually exclusively with on or more CMS' there is also a massive and virtually untapped market of clients who need the job done, at a price that suits.

SiteBid.com plugs that gap, and through heavy online promotion should attract organisations seeking to maximise their online presence with a dynamic CMS.

There are other similar services on the internet, however none specialise in the deployment of Open Source CMS systems only, and the leading sites charge as much as $100 per month plus commission.

It is free for developers to register as a professional on SiteBid, furthermore we will apply a $5 bonus credit to your account, to ensure you make money before we do! This will be deducted from the extremely reasonable 1% commission rate, meaning you pay no commission on the first $500 worth of business that you successfully bid for.

As for the commissions – the majority of this will be spent on marketing the services of our registered professionals to the wider world. Using a range of techniques including affiliate programmes, PPC placement, button and banner campaigns, and regular press releases submitted to the world's online and real world media.

SiteBid aims to quickly secure a steady stream of buyers who will be posting their projects online, but before we can do that we need the professionals who are ready, willing and able to come on over, register, and complete their profile so we can show you the money and let the revolution begin.
SiteBid.com

Launched this week, SiteBid.com is the latest development in the Open Source Content Management Community. A b2b marketplace through which developers, designers, project managers, and other web professionals with experience of one or more of the Open Source CMS systems may freely bid for projects.

There is a rapidly growing but loose network of web development companies, and individuals who are working virtually exclusively with on or more CMS' there is also a massive and virtually untapped market of clients who need the job done, at a price that suits.

SiteBid.com plugs that gap, and through heavy online promotion should attract organisations seeking to maximise their online presence with a dynamic CMS.

There are other similar services on the internet, however none specialise in the deployment of Open Source CMS systems only, and the leading sites charge as much as $100 per month plus commission.

It is free for developers to register as a professional on SiteBid, furthermore we will apply a $5 bonus credit to your account, to ensure you make money before we do! This will be deducted from the extremely reasonable 1% commission rate, meaning you pay no commission on the first $500 worth of business that you successfully bid for.

As for the commissions – the majority of this will be spent on marketing the services of our registered professionals to the wider world. Using a range of techniques including affiliate programmes, PPC placement, button and banner campaigns, and regular press releases submitted to the world's online and real world media.

SiteBid aims to quickly secure a steady stream of buyers who will be posting their projects online, but before we can do that we need the professionals who are ready, willing and able to come on over, register, and complete their profile so we can show you the money and let the revolution begin.

SiteBid.com