The last version of the Guide of the Open Sources Softwares (for companies) has just been published by Idealx.

Quote:

> Created in 2002 to help the DSI to approach the open source, IDEALX Guide of the Open Software Source became a reference impossible to circumvent and the daily working tool of many data-processing persons in charge.
> The Open Source has today its place in Si and, in accordance with its objective, this guide presents only software worthy of interest, tested and qualified in production.

Xoops appears in the category "management of contents" with a good quotation (it seems to me that it is the first appearance in this guide).
That pleases to me to see this recognition in the world of the companies with respect to work provides by the community.

I set up Xoops in my structure for a working group that wants to say that I was not mistaken in product
